S T A T E M E N T

On the night of 8 February 1950 at approximately 1145EST while flying as pilot of B-29 letting down into traffic pattern at MacDill AFB on a heading of 201 degrees magnetic, nose of plane was pointed at southeast side of Tampa, approximately eighteen (18) miles ahead I noticed an apparent meteor approaching from left side of airplane. It didn't burn out and continued on. When prior to being directly over head I noticed that its path had an appearance of a rocket with terrific speed and holding level flight attitude and straight heading. I followed its flight across the plane remarking something like: "Look at that damned thing," and moving my head to the side of the wheel to see it vanish straight on its course to the right of the plane. One (1) pilot passenger got a glimpse of it, I feel, by his hearing my remark.

The speed, I would estimate, would be in excess of 2000 mph. The flame remained constant behind the nose of the plane for a distance of at least 300 feet (this depending on the altitude would vary) and then changing into a very dull glow in the sky. The width of the flame compared to the length would be 1 X 10. If flame length was 300 feet the width would be 30 feet. Sky was clear at this time with haze in lower levels. I don't think this was a meteor. I radioed this information to Tampa Approach Control immediately after sighting.
